

Assistant Professor of Psychology

The University of Findlay invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track position in psychology at the level of assistant professor, beginning Fall 2012. Candidates should demonstrate a strong commitment to liberal arts education, mentoring undergraduate research, and supervising student internships. Preference will be given to candidates with a Ph.D. in clinical psychology from a professionally accredited program. Teaching responsibilities may include: abnormal psychology, research methods and statistics, counseling, health psychology, personality, introductory psychology, and advanced courses in areas of expertise. Candidates will be expected to develop an active research program and engage in service to the university and the community. The psychology program is housed in the Department of Social, Behavioral, and Justice Sciences.

The University of Findlay is a comprehensive master's institution and the largest private university in northwest Ohio. The City of Findlay, population 40,000, is recognized as one of the best micropolitan communities in Ohio, with a strong business base and school system and a friendly atmosphere. More information is available on our Web site at www.findlay.edu.

Candidates should submit a cover letter detailing a teaching philosophy and research interests, a current CV, and the names and addresses of three references. Reference letters and official transcripts might be requested at a later date. Application materials should be submitted to Dr. Gary Johnson, Dean; College of Liberal Arts; The University of Findlay; 1000 North Main Street; Findlay, OH 45840; or emailed to sims@findlay.edu. Review of applications will begin March 1 and continue until the position is filled. The University of Findlay is an equal opportunity employer.
